War and Peace are the two contrasting faces of a civilization. But unfortunately mankind has seen more Wars than periods of peace. And with the progress of Science and technology, war is becoming more widespread and more devastating. The two wars faced by the world during the last century encompassed the whole world and took the toll of millions of human lives and brought about almost total destruction of property including means of transport and communication. The Second World War affected not only those who were living but also those who were yet to be born, because of the effects of radiation caused by the dropping of atom bombs. And today there are hydrogen bombs and nitrogen bombs which are many times more powerful than atom bombs.

War has no justification. It only leads to death and destruction. It distracts the normal life of the people and puts back the clock of progress by years. Colossal destruction of life and property results from a war.
